NEW 'GIANT OF THE SEA' FROM ROSETTI MARINO: THE MARLIN PLATFORM LEAVES FOR THE IVORY COAST

The platform (deck) built by the Ravenna-based company for Foxtrot International of the Ivory Coast will leave the Rosetti Marino yard in Marina di Ravenna on the morning of Thursday 12 March 2015.

The platform is bound for the Ivory Coast and is fitted internally with equipment for extracting and processing both oil and gas. Loaded onto a huge barge towed by the deep sea tug "Carlo Martello" (also built by Rosetti a few years ago), the platform will reach West Africa in just over a month; it is expected to arrive on 14 April.

Some details

- Weight: 5,000 tonnes when loaded
- Height: 42 metres above sea level
- Length and breadth: 50 by 30 metres.
- Useable space: 3 main floors, including an accommodation module for 20 people.

The Marlin deck will be installed on the jacket that Rosetti Marino also dispatched to the Ivory Coast in September last year.

The deck construction took two years, that is 1.5 million man hours in total.

The CEO Oscar Guerra emphasises, with great satisfaction, that there were no major workplace accidents during the entire construction process, reflecting the importance that Rosetti Marino attaches to the issue of safety. The contract provided employment for 650 people in the yard, together with seventy professionals at the production engineering stage.

Rosetti Marino staff (about a hundred technicians) will then go to the Ivory Coast to handle the installation of the platform on the jacket until production actually begins, after about two months of work in the Atlantic Ocean.

Rosetti Marino expresses great pleasure at having completed the construction of this important facility, the largest of its kind ever installed in the Ivory Coast, confirming the technical and innovative abilities that have always been a hallmark of this Ravenna-based company.

Despite the current international economic situation being unfavourable for the oil industry, one that will undoubtedly be analysed during the next Offshore Mediterranean Conference, to be held in Ravenna on 25 - 27 March, Rosetti Marino is also confirming, with the Marlin platform, that it is paying great attention to the African market, pursuing research and innovation in a laudable combination with safety at work and regard for employment in our region.
